Dear Families,

When my oldest daughter was three she loved to help. She was always asking if she could help. One day I was folding towels and she asked if she could help me....she did it in her 3 year old way....kind of making a ball of towel. And after she went to bed I “fixed” them as I wanted them in my 30-year-old way! When she saw the towels, she cried and she said, “Mom I was helping you but it wasn’t good enough”. So I took the time to teach her how it had to be folded to fit into the cabinet. And lesson learned for me....things don’t have to be perfect especially if helping hands are in there! And now her 5-year-old is the same way. She wants to help always. And she is the protector of her baby brother....they are adorable together. And when her mom gets upset with her for helping too much I remind her of how helpful she was as a child too! Having two girls myself and now having the two ages 5 and 3 I have flashbacks to my girls. And when my daughter complains they fight I say, “oh really? My girls never did!”

Blessings on your 2017

Diane Lee
