Dear Families,

My youngest grandson, Teddy whom we call Teddy Bear, just turned One. As his 5 year old sister said now he isn't zero anymore! Congratulations Teddy on not being zero! He is starting to walk and watch out! If it isn't nailed down nail it down now! It is hard to remember this age as it goes so fast. Kids grow so quickly you do need to savor each age. I didn't do that as a young parent. I remember thinking oh if only they were out of diapers. And only if they were in high school and could drive and only if they were out of college and on their own. POOF they are! And that was a blink of an eye. I know it is hard to savor things like braces and sibling fighting and all that comes with children but our house is so quiet now when the grandkids aren't there! It is just me and my husband and the dog. Though I think the dog is thinking of taking my place. Every time I get out of my chair I turn around and she is in it! Looking like, "what? What did I do?" She is good with our grandkids which I am grateful for. They can pull her tail or her ears and she just sits there! Though I think she knows what is higher on the food chain!

So today I am going to try and savor my time and look forward to Easter and making memories with my grandkids. They get so excited that it brings me back to my childhood and that of my girls!

Blessed Easter to you and yours! Good luck finding those Easter eggs!

Peace,

Diane
